

The Longmont Shambhala Meditation Group Invites You to CELEBRATE the SUMMER SOLSTICE/ MIDSUMMER'S DAY

Over the years, the Shambhala community has adopted a tradition of celebrating the changes of the seasons. These are called nyida days, from the Tibetan words nyima (sun) and dawa (moon). Nyida days occur on or near the days of the equinoxes and solstices. All four nyida days are regarded as family-oriented celebrations. Midsummer's Day is a celebration associated with the summer solstice. The day often begins with a lhasang (a traditional offering of juniper smoke) that purifies the environment and invokes awakened energy. This gathering is an opportunity for families and friends to enjoy summer fun together.
